It has just occurred to me that when he was taking me around, Townley stopped off at Bringuier's, called into the store to get him to come out. B. was busy with a customer and I persuaded Townley to drive on. I now understand how B could have been waiting with his trusty lil auto 35. He'd been told. T & B appear to be on a first-name basis. Had B behaved as he did the morning of 5/2, with T there instead of a plain-clothes officer, the result might have been different. This was probably 4/28.
